This text provides in-depth balanced content covering the beginnings of U.S. history through the present. Measuring History complements the cases presented in Wise Social Studies Practices (Yeager & Davis, 2005). Yeager and Davis highlight the rich and ambitious teaching that can occur in the broad context of state-level testing. In this book, the chapter authors and I bring the particular state history tests more to the fore and examine how teachers are responding to them. At the heart of Measuring History are cases of classroom teachers in seven states (Florida, Kentucky, Michigan, New York, Texas, Mississippi, and Virginia) where new social studies standards and new, and generally high-stakes, state-level history tests are prominent. In these chapters, the authors describe and analyze the state's testing efforts and how those efforts are being interpreted in the context of classroom practice. The results both support and challenge prevailing views on the efficacy of testing as a vehicle for educational reform. Catherine Horn (University of Houston) and I lay the groundwork for the case studies through a set of introductory chapters that examine the current environment, the research literature, and the technical qualities of history tests.

This comprehensive resource is an invaluable teaching aid for adding a global dimension to students' understanding of American history. It includes a wide range of materials from scholarly articles and reports to original syllabi and ready-to-use lesson plans to guide teachers in enlarging the frame of introductory American history courses to an international view. The contributors include well-known American history scholars as well as gifted classroom teachers, and the book's emphasis on immigration, race, and gender points to ways for teachers to integrate international and multicultural education, America in the World, and The World in America in their courses. The book also includes a 'Views from Abroad' section that examines problems and strategies for teaching American history to foreign and theology, but its clarity and scope ensures it will be accessible to anyone who has considered what it means to be mortal.

This study was designed to compare the performance skills in World History/Geography I ninth grade students for map drawing and map labeling activities. The study used a pre-posttest design. An experimental group was instructed to draw maps, while a control group was instructed to label an outline map. An independent t test was used to compare the results of the pre- and post geography performance scores. The study found no significant difference between the two groups. Although the results did not reach statistical significance, a positive relationship was discovered between drawing maps and geography skills in ninth grade World History/Geography I students.

Charles Darwin made many significant contributions to the way we understand evolution and the origin of species. Descriptive examples of his theories on evolution and natural selection will help give young readers insight into the conclusions that scientists have made about how all living things have evolved. A biographical look into Darwin's life shows readers how he came to form his revolutionary theories and the adventures he took to further validate his findings. This resource book is designed to assist teachers in implementing California's history-social science framework at the 10th grade level. The models support implementation at the local level and may be used to plan topics and select resources for professional development and preservice education. This document provides a link between the framework's course descriptions and teachers' lesson plans by suggesting substantive resources and instructional strategies to be used in conjunction with textbooks and supplementary materials. The resource book is divided into eight units: (1) "Unresolved Problems of the Modern World"; (2) "Connecting with Past Learnings: The Rise of Democratic Ideas"; (3) "The Industrial Revolution"; (4) "The Rise of Imperialism and Colonialism: A Case Study of India"; (5) "World War I and Its Consequences"; (6) "Totalitarianism in the Modern World: Nazi Germany and Stalinist Russia"; (7) "World War II: Its Causes and Consequences"; and (8) "Nationalism in the
