To avoid conscription into the Sudanese army, seventeen-year-old Francis Zegino leaves his native town of Juba, Sudan, Africa, in 1964, with no shoes and one pair of clothes to join Anyanya, a guerrilla coalition fighting for South Sudan's freedom from Sudan. During his two-year sojourn with Anyanya, Francis goes on various primitive hunting adventures, surviving malaria by eating bush-herbs. He marries Lucia, twenty-three, and they take refuge in the Central African Republic, but Lucia leaves to help her parents' refugee settlement in Bambuti and does not return. Francis later earns a United Nations scholarship to further his studies, which he pursues first in Banqui and then in Liberia. While teaching at two different Liberian institutes, he meets his second wife, Mary, and marries her in 1986. Four years later, their family leaves Liberia amid its civil war. They walk through the bushes for five days, enduring all kinds of hardships, before finally reaching the Ivory Coast, where they settle in Danane and establish a school. Facing prejudicial attacks from jealous factions in Danane, Francis applies for

United States residency and finally settles in Memphis, Tennessee, as a permanent refugee. Unable to obtain a teaching job in the US without an American degree, he obtains one in education from Christian Brothers University while working different jobs: factory worker, security officer, and substitute teacher. These jobs teach him important values such as cooperation, responsibility, and self-discipline--values he really learns upon receiving a point-blank letter from his wife accusing him of using and neglecting her and not contributing his share of work and responsibility toward their family and household. Hearing of South Sudan's separation from Sudan through a voter referendum--98 percent said aye--Francis Zegino is hopeful that this newly self-governing nation will one day follow America's example as a model of cultural diversity, open democracy, and liberty and justice for all, despite the war, illiteracy, and poverty that continue to plague his native land. This book argues that COVID-19 revives a much deeper climate of terror which was instilled by terrorism and the War on Terror originally declared by Bush's administration in 2001. It discusses critically not only the consequences of COVID-19 on our daily lives but also “the end of hospitality”, at least as we know it. Since COVID-19 started spreading across the globe, it affected not only the tourism industry but also ground global trade to a halt. Governments adopted restrictive measures to stop the spread of the virus, including the closure of borders, and airspace, the introduction of strict lockdowns and social distancing, much of which led to large-scale cancellations of international and domestic flights. This book explores how global tourists, who were largely considered ambassadors of democratic and prosperous societies in the pre-pandemic days, have suddenly become undesired guests.

The book revises the Declaration of Independence and U.S. Constitution to make them fully consistent with the protection of individual rights and freedom. It shows what rights and freedom are, why they are crucial to human life, and how to protect them in the fundamental legal documents of a nation

The growth of world trade has been stagnant in recent times; trade liberalisation now has been challenged. The recent rise of anti-globalisation calls for a better integration in East Asia. How should East Asia manage its openness? This book provides profound analyses on rules of origins, non-tariff measures, restrictiveness in services and investment. It gives insight into how East Asian countries should shape its trade, investment and industrial policies. This book helps to answer what kind of a better integration it should be, and how East Asia can realise it. Francis Gbee's dream for his country is thus, "[for] our motherland, for us to rise and raise our flag with the guiding star while singing songs of freedom with joy, for justice, liberty and prosperity shall forever more reign." But he realizes that the price of many lives will have to be paid to achieve this vision. This can be realized through this book.

Corporate Fraud Exposed uncovers the motivations and drivers of fraud including agency theory, executive compensation, and organizational culture. It delves into the consequences of fraud for various firm stakeholders, and its spillover effects on other corporations, the political environment, and financial market participants. For centuries, the importance of financial accounting has been well understood. Essential to building businesses, states, and even empires, accounting has also helped leaders measure their power and craft their policies. When practiced poorly or neglected, accounting has contributed to cycles of destruction, as the 2008 financial crisis has made all too clear. In The Reckoning, award-winning historian Jacob Soll shows how the use and misuse of financial bookkeeping has determined the fate of entire societies. In the right hands, accounting has created social stability, good governance, and economic prosperity. In the wrong hands, good accounting practices have often been subverted, with disastrous results ranging from financial losses and debt to complete economic collapse. From the Medici bankers to the director of finances under Louis XVI, from the Industrial Revolution to the Stock Market Crash of 1929 and the Great Recession, The Reckoning demonstrates that civilizations are only as strong as their bookkeepers. One Shade of Black

Set in modern times this is a retelling of the classic story of Joseph. Joseph and his brothers are in an Atlanta church that is exploding in growth. The charismatic and powerful pastor is Jacob Black. Jacob has offspring by women all over town and finally finds his one true love Rachel. He marries her and settles down. There is a bit of didactic in that Jacob introduces his signature program "Jacob's LADDER" as a way to assuage his own demons for having 10 boys out of wedlock. As a pastor he is sorry and wants to atone by giving youth from broken backgrounds a solid foundation to stand on. His young son Joseph takes the challenge and makes a VOW that it takes faith and fortitude to keep. Watch his journey as female after female tries to entrap him and steal his vow. There is a surprise ending that even the seasoned veteran will be caught off guard by

Most studies of doing business at the "bottom of the economic pyramid" focus on viewing the poor as consumers, as micro-entrepreneurs, or as potential employees of local companies. Almost no analysis focuses on the poor as primary producers of agricultural commodities a striking omission given that primary producers are by far the largest segment of the working-age population in developing economies. Making Markets More Inclusive bridges the management literature with original research on agricultural value chains in developing and emerging economies. This exciting work is the first to delve into the skills, capabilities, strategies and approaches needed for inclusive value chain development. McKague shows how NGOs and companies can connect poor producers in developing economies with the right markets to better create social and economic impact. He also analyzes one of the leading agricultural value chain initiatives in the world, which is being replicated by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation in several different value chains in Malawi, Tanzania, Ghana, India, and Mali.
