The main site tells the story of Georgia's history from the Bronze Age to the early 20th century. It's the story of 'The Land of the Golden Fleece' - the ancient Kingdom of Colchis, whose ingenious gold, silver and precious stonework can be seen in the Treasury. The Greek, Ottoman and Iranian Influence visible in many of the treasures is testament to Georgia's role as a crossroads through the centuries. The GNM also records Georgia's modern history, tracing the rise of a united Georgian state, how it resisted Soviet Occupation and survived the Red Terror. However, perhaps most significantly of all, here visitors can come face-to-face with the earliest homonid known to have left Africa - a 1.8 million-year-old discovery made by the GNM's Director, Professor David Lordkipanidze, that has rewritten our understanding of early European humanity. In this beautifully illustrated book, Professor Lordkipanidze illuminates his personal highlights from the collection with his considerable expertise.

Described as "a breakthrough book," "Slow Leadership" demolishes the myths that support an adrenaline-fueled view of business, showing instead why we must move away from our obsession with short-term results, towards a better long-term understanding of what makes working life worthwhile. As corporations become ever more obsessed with short-term goals and "meeting the numbers," people are being sacrificed to build profit, a long-hours culture is steadily taking over, and restless, macho-style management is becoming the norm. After a career spent in management on both sides of the Atlantic, Adrian W. Savage sees this situation for what it is: the natural response of leaders who believe they must boost profits by the quickest possible means, however unpleasant the consequences, because relying on innovation and creative thinking is too slow and uncertain for a world of global competition. "Slow Leadership" recognizes that good leadership takes time, thought, intelligence, attention, and wisdom. By rejecting instant answers, outdated management dogma, and the trappings of macho-style, "grab-n-go" management, this book offers a practical alternative to today's brute force approaches to increasing productivity that produce short-term wins at the cost of long-term exhaustion and collapse. The style of management that most often results from this pressure for speed and quick fixes, "Hamburger Management," is like the menu in a typical fast-food outlet: simple, plain, repetitive, and based on whatever is fastest and cheapest. "Slow Leadership" offers effective ways for returning civilization and humanity to organizations, without lowering productivity. This fascinating and provocative book will open managers' mind to organizational truths that are seldom acknowledged - and even less often acted upon. Born in Grenada in 1900, Leslie Hutchinson went to America in 1916 to study medicine, but soon escaped to Harlem where he witnessed the birth of "stride" jazz piano. Moving to France in 1923, he became the protege and lover of Cole Porter before coming to London in 1926 where he was soon topping the bills in variety and on radio.

Immaculate in white tie and tails, Hutch had enormous sex appeal, his velvet voice and superb piano improvisation attracting legions of fans among both the rich and the slump-struck poor. Despite his success however, Hutch was a profoundly insecure man with insatiable appetites for sex, drink, gambling and social status which precipitated his fall from fame to a squalid existence by the late 1960s. This book provides a detailed look at his interesting life.

Mike Dowson's photography is simply a case of capturing the moment - he distances himself from any kind of staging and stylisation. This lack of style has become a style in itself - the style of 'laissez faire.' His photographs of pretty girls appear fresh, unconsumed, spontaneous, tasteful and very erotic. Dowson's models must always convey the feeling of availability, the petty bourgeois may call them tarts. However, these girls are no such thing, they are just young, being themselves and showing their lust for life.
