This book explores the many dialogues that exist between the arts and literacy. It shows how the arts are inherently multimodal and therefore interface regularly with literate practice in learning and teaching contexts. It asks the questions: What does literacy look like in the arts? And what does it mean to be arts literate? It explores what is important to know and do in the arts and also what literacies are engaged in, through the journey to becoming an artist. The arts for the purpose of this volume include five art forms: Dance, Drama, Media Arts, Music and Visual Arts. The book provides a more productive exploration of the arts-literacy relationship. It acknowledges that both the arts and literacy are open-textured concepts and notes how they accommodate each other, learn about, and from each other and can potentially make education 'better'. It is when the two stretch each other that we see an educationally productive dialogic relationship emerge.

A funny, sad and serious memoir, How to Be Happy is David Burton's story of his turbulent life at high school and beyond. Feeling out of place and convinced that he is not normal, David has a rocky start. He longs to have a girlfriend, but his first 'date' is a disaster. There's the catastrophe of the school swimming carnival—David is not sporty—and friendships that take devastating turns. Then he finds some solace in drama classes with the creation of 'Crazy Dave', and he builds a life where everything is fine. But everything is not fine. And, at the centre of it all, trying desperately to work it all out, is the real David. How to Be Happy tackles depression, friendship, sexual identity, suicide, academic pressure, love and adolescent confusion. It's a brave and honest account of one young man's search for a happy, true and meaningful life that will resonate with readers young and old. David Burton is a twenty-seven-year-old writer from Brisbane, best known for his theatre work. His play April's Fool (Playlab Press) toured nationally in 2012. He has recently co-written Hedonism's Second Album for La Boite indie, and The Landmine Is Me for Queensland Theatre Company. A speaker and presenter in school across Queensland, David is passionate about sharing his remarkable story with young people. How to Be Happy won the Text Prize for Young Adult and Children's Writing in 2014.

'[Burton] delivers some devastating truth bombs. Sexuality is hard. Identity is hard. Love is hard. School is hard...This book shines a much-needed light back through the tunnel. It is a call-out to teenagers still struggling to find their way. How to Be Happy says "here's the path I took, hope it helps".' Books & Publishing 'I'm blown away by Burton's raw honesty and admirable wit.' Alpha Reader 'A fast-paced read that reminded me of one of my favourite memoirs, I thoroughly enjoyed this book.' Bumbling Bookworm 'How to Be Happy is easily a five star book ...I just can't fathom my love for this book into words. You all need to read it.' Endless Pages 'How to Be Happy is funny. Bitingly, embarrassingly, genuinely—FUNNY...This book is gold, and if I could I'd make it mandatory reading in schools.' Alpha Reader 'This is an important book, one that deserves our attention... Highly recommended.' Reading Time 'Anyone who has ever felt like they didn't fit in will be able to relate to the story of David's unusual childhood and teenage years. I wish there had been a book like this when I was 14.' Get Reading 'How to Be Happy is a perfect books for teens and adults...It's funny, touching, and insightful, and I think it could help a lot of people feel less isolated.' Bookish Manicurist 'Burton's descriptions of his anxiety and depression are tangibly poignant, giving authentic voice to those struggling with similar issues. His tone morphs fluidly from compulsively funny to devastating from one moment to the next, and his uproarious wit shines throughout. A heartfelt, accessible book that strives to break down the stigmas surrounding mental illness with remarkable humor and honesty.' Kirkus Reviews

In 2009, Brisbane's Catholic community was rocked when the catholic Church stepped in to oust beloved priest Father Kennedy from his post at St Mary's in South Brisbane. He led more than 700 devoted parishioners, but the Church's higher powers doubted his faith. They scorned the statue of Buddha in the foyer and frowned when he blessed same-sex couple, or let women into the pulpit. So, on a stormy night, after refusing to resign or to fall in line with orthodoxy, an excommunicated Father Peter is packing up to go into exile - when a mysterious young homeless visitor walks out of the rain, wanting to know the story behind this unconventional holy man and what drove him to defy one of the world's most powerful authorities. Gripping and inspirational drama, St Mary's in Exile is the story of a tight-knit community, a poignant reminder that the word 'church' refers not to the 123-year-old heritage listed Renaissance building, but the bond between the disparate people who gather there. A bond that endured when Peter handed over the keys amid a media frenzy, and led his flock down the street to the Trades and Labour Council building, where they still worship every weekend.

A mysterious white-clad figure leads a girl towards a family mystery in this moving middle-grade adventure story of family change and buried secrets Freja arrives in Singapore during the month of the hungry ghost, when old spirits are said to roam the streets. She's struggling to settle into her dad's new, 'happy' family, and dreams only of escaping home and leaving this hot, unfamiliar city. Then one night, a mysterious girl in a white dress appears in the garden. Freja follows this figure to lush, secretive corners of the city, seeking to understand the girl's identity. Her search will lead her to an old family mystery - one that must be unravelled before the month is over, to allow both girls to be freed from the secrets of the past.

The Missing Barbegazi is a wintery middle grade fantasy about the importance of family and the power of hope.

Groundwater is the most important source of domestic, industrial, and agricultural water and also a finite resource. Population growth has created an unprecedented demand for water, with the situation most critical in the developing world, where several million people depend on contaminated groundwater for drinking purposes. Geogenic contaminants, This book comprises innovative research on the information behavior of various age groups. It also looks at special populations such as ethnic minorities, indigenous peoples, and users with disabilities. The book presents research and reflections on designing systems that help the new generation cope with a complex knowledge society.

Tells the story of the Gepps Cross abattoirs and saleyard complex, from its utopian concept through its years of growth and operation to its eventual ruin as a victim of competing interests. A comprehensive and abundantly illustrated history.

This report reviews economic concepts of innovation, research and development (R&D), productivity and competitiveness, and their linkages in agriculture.

In this edited collection, the authors pick up the communities of practice (CoP) approach of sharing practice in their reflection on the experience of taking their CoP vision from a dream to reality. Their stories articulate the vision, the passion and the challenge of working within and/or changing existing institutional culture and practice. The book discusses strategies that worked and considers the lessons learnt to inspire future dreamers and schemers. The multiple perspectives provided in the case studies will assist higher education leaders, as well as academic and professional staff, in establishing or assessing CoPs. The book offers insights into implementation strategies, practical guidelines and ideas on how CoP theoretical underpinnings can be tailored to the higher education context.

When two college co-eds on summer break are invited to a bondage-themed party at an expansive beachfront mansion by an attractive couple in their 30's, they are intrigued and decide to attend. Upon their arrival, not only are they placed in tight restraint, they are informed that they will be active participants in many different scenarios - whether they wish to or not. We follow Megan as she is separated from her friend Jill and put in different situations, each of which open her eyes to both new levels of discomfort, humiliation - and excitement. Megan cannot understand why she gets more and more aroused as she is used as a tool of sexual gratification by other men and women. Her protests (during the brief moments when her mouth is not stuffed by a gag) are ignored and her struggles are met with amused smiles, as she has no way to free herself. She only understands that the ropes, clamps, plugs, and other devices that decorate her voluptuous body give her more pleasure than pain as she is made to perform as others wish. Each situation progressively becomes more intense, with greater punishments driving Megan to the very point of orgasm, even as she continues to question the reasons for her arousal. Her tormentors, Ryan and Ellen, recognize this, and push her harder and faster, to the point that she breaks down as she recognizes and accepts her submissive nature. After she has broken, they approach her and tell her that the true reason they brought her here will soon be revealed. Megan is confused...wasn't the point of bringing her here to teach about her desire to serve and be used by others? She is shocked when she finally learns the truth. The question is, how will she respond?

Research shows that the available statistics estimating that transport only represents 4% of the total Australian agricultural output are a far cry from the reality. This research finds that from the farm to a the foreign customer (delivered to the foreign port of entry of domestic central market), transport cost of Australia's agricultural products represent between 4% and 48.5% of the farm gate value, with an average of 8.75% for domestic delivery and 23.64% for international delivery. These results have been obtained through twelve different case studies and assess all the costs incurred to the different stakeholders of the supply chain (road freight, storage, handling, wharf fee...). While these results cannot be extrapolated to respective agricultural industries as a whole, they demonstrate that for many products, particularly beef cattle and grain, transport costs are a major part of the total cost to produce and deliver the product to its destination. The work constitutes a benchmark against which changes in transport costs can be assessed and compared over time. It is also hoped that the Australian agricultural transport costs identified, as part of this research, will be able to be compared with transport costs incurred by agricultural producers in other countries. As the title suggests, this is an ambitious book. Broad in scope and rich in detail, it examines the rise and fall of Japanese foreign direct investment (FDI) in nearly two dozen industries, from electronics and automobile manufacturing to real estate and construction services, in almost every region of the world over the past half century or more. The result is an encyclopedic volume (459 pages with index). . . useful for East Asian business scholars or those interested in the overseas activities of Japanese firms. Farrell has written. . . a sweeping survey of Japanese FDI. Walter Hatch, Journal of Japanese Studies Roger Farrell has written a weighty compendium on Japanese direct foreign investment. At over 450 pages it covers the full array of Japan s diverse industries and sectors, from fisheries and lumber to steel and automobiles, and in the service industries from banking to telecommunications. Apart from the breadth of coverage, this work is even more remarkable considering that Japanese multinationals and their overseas investments have been largely under the radar of social scientists of late, especially so since the ascent of China in the early years of the present decade. David W. Edgington, Growth and Change Enhanced with indexes, appendixes, and editorial opinions on the subject, Japanese Investment in the World Economy is a complete and comprehensive scholarly reference, ideal for college and community library economics collections. Midwest Book Review The Economics Shelf This book examines Japanese Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) in the world economy over more than five decades. It provides a unique focus on the internationalisation experience of selected industries, such as forestry, textiles, electronics, motor vehicles, steel and services as well as case studies of individual firms. Roger Farrell considers the theoretical explanations for Japanese FDI and particular motivations which have been an ongoing rationale for FDI, including: energy and resource security the theme of retaining market access the relocation of manufacturing to retain international competitiveness withdrawal after the bubble economy the new phase of investment in the 2000s. Japanese Investment in the World Economy is distinctive in that it examines overseas investment by firms in the primary, manufacturing and services sectors over the period in which the Japanese economy became the second largest in the world. The book provides a succinct overview of Japanese FDI of interest to professionals and students of business, economics, international relations, politics and Japanese culture.

In the years preceding the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, the United States lacked a comprehensive national policy and strategy for aviation security. The United States approach to aviation security had largely been shaped by past events such as the bombing of Pan Am flight 103 in December, 1988. This book explores the national aviation security policy established by the President. The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) has developed a publicly-available national strategy for aviation security that addresses threats to aviation using a risk-based methodology to complement the overarching National Infrastructure Protection Plan (NIPP) and seeks to deter and prevent terrorist attacks against aviation, mitigate damage and expedite recovery and minimise the impact of an attack to the aviation system. The strategy seeks to achieve these objectives by engaging domestic and international partners and carrying out specific actions set forth in a series of supporting plans for operational security, surveillance and intelligence, threat response, system recovery, and co-ordination.
