Some people think that Halloween is about devilish creatures and ghost, while other people think that it is an excuse to get free candy from stores. In fact, Halloween is more than just about candy. Halloween celebrations are all about trick or treating, the traditional way of celebrating Halloween where kids gather around a house to ask for treats under the tree or in the door. Children give out small tokens like candies, chocolates or even costume jewelry as gifts to each other and their friends on Halloween night. Kids also spend the evening in neighborhood squares, playgrounds, town square and other areas holding contests and playing games such as "trick or treat" or "free for all" to win small trinkets and other Halloween candy.
