The poems in this volume are separated by the decades of the author's life in which they were written. She speaks of the occurrences that women commonly face during these times of their lives, but which "no one tells you" are coming. Debborah's desire is to reach out to women of all ages and share her experiences, so that they may know that they are not alone. These poems are also the author's legacy to her family. It is always the poet's desire to share their heart and soul. In this case it is the poet's desire to share this with every reader, but also poignantly, her family and generations to come, so that they may hold a bit of her in their hands and close to their hearts, always. The poems in this book are written with joy, love, sorrow, humor, great insight and a constantly evolving sensibility and talent. If you are a woman or have ever loved one, and wished to understand her better, this is the poetry book for you.
