The BNVR Test is a unique non-linguistic approach for identifying whether a cognitive (problem-solving) deficit as well as a linguistic deficit exists in individuals with acquired aphasia. Recognising cognitive deficits in terms of problem-solving may be a key factor in understanding why some individuals overcome their communication difficulties better than others. Failure to recognise problem-solving difficulties may lead to unrealistic expectations of therapeutic intervention and thus inappropriate management and goal setting. The BNVR requires the client to solve 10 everyday problems, presented in full-colour photographic format. It is short, requires minimal linguistic input, contains real-life situations and is likely to be suitable for non-English speaking individuals. It will be useful to speech language therapists, occupational therapists and psychologists who need to ascertain whether problem-solving skills are affected and to assist in multi-disciplinary team decision-making in acute and rehabilitation settings.

Reading comprehension solving is a skill. It is different from literature in the sense that it is independent of interpretation. There is no subjectivity in RC questions. The art of solving can be learnt by mastering the topic at three levels – The ability to read, to eliminate options and to build mistake patterns to learn from them. These three levels lie at the core of "Algorithmic Reading Comprehension" – an approach to build expertise in RC solving. This approach was created by my team and me over the past 6 years of training thousands of students for the Reading comprehension section for CAT-GMAT and other aptitude-based entrance examinations. The book deals with two major aspects of reading, "Central Idea" and "Contextual Word Learning". It moves on to discuss the meaning of different question types asked across exams and provides elimination frameworks to tackle tricky options. Finally, students get many passages arranged in levels and then in a practice chapter to practice and to learn from. Welcome to the world of flawless RC learning!
